/EINPresswire.com/ New Hauser Air website provides information on air conditioning, heating systems including high efficiency furnaces, as well as air conditioning and heating repair services. Customers browse HVAC products, sign up for a service agreement, or schedule a service appointment.

Hauser Air Heating and Air Conditioning recently launched a new website featuring details on its complete line of HVAC products and services, which are presented in an easy-to-navigate design. The new website provides information on air conditioning units, heating systems including high efficiency furnaces, as well as air conditioning and heating repair services.

Customers can quickly find information on a variety of HVAC products for residential and commercial needs. As a factory authorized Carrier® dealer, Hauser Air presents a comprehensive selection of air conditioners, heating systems, heat pumps, indoor air quality systems, and more. The new website includes information on the newest innovations in efficiency including zoned heating and cooling systems, high efficiency furnaces, geothermal systems, and digital thermostats. In addition to product descriptions, the website provides informative features including customer reviews, frequently asked questions, and a blog on HVAC topics. There is also a section that helps customers determine whether to repair or replace HVAC equipment.

The new Hauser Air website provides complete information on air conditioning and heating repair services. Customers can also find details on preventative maintenance and service agreements. The interactive contact form allows customers to easily sign up for a service agreement or schedule a service appointment.
