FORT LAUDERDALE, FL, USA, December 3, 2013 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Receiving a driver's license suspension in the State of Florida is not only an inconvenience, it can have long-term financial consequences in the form of increased insurance premiums. Insurance companies consider a driver with a license suspension to be "high risk" and increase their rates accordingly.

Fort Lauderdale-based defense attorney Guy Seligman says, "Florida drivers with a license suspension need to get reinstated as soon as possible and work to keep a clean driving record, if they want to see their insurance premiums go back down." Seligman, who has three decades of legal experience, helps clients get their suspended driver's licenses reinstated.

Accumulating points, failure to pay traffic rickets and DUI are the most common reasons for a license suspension. "Obviously, the more violations on your driving record, the more your insurance company will charge you ... if you can even find insurance," said Seligman. "In order to enjoy low insurance premiums, you must maintain a valid driver's license as well as adhere to traffic laws."

Driving with a suspended license has serious consequences in the state of Florida and the sooner these problems are addressed the better. It is important to speak to an experienced driver's license suspension lawyer like Guy Seligman. "If your license has been suspended there is a chance I can get it back for you," said Seligman. "My goal is to devise a strategy that can help you get back in good standing, which will get you back on the road and over time help lower your insurance rates."

Seligman suggests that anyone at risk of losing their license, or those with already suspended or revoked licenses contact his new hot line at: 954/760-7600 covering Miami, Fort Lauderdale, West Palm Beach, Orlando, Jacksonville, Tampa, and all of Florida. His hotline is available 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, including holidays.
