

Lewis & Dickstein, P.L.L.C. Was Able to Get a Dismissal of an Operating While Intoxicated Charge

SOUTHFIELD, MI, USA, February 12, 2014

/EINPresswire.com/ -- Loren M. Dickstein of the law firm Lewis & Dickstein was able to get a dismissal of an Operating While Intoxicated charge in Oakland County, Michigan. Because of Loren's expertise he was able to evaluate the client's case and convince the prosecutor to dismiss the charges.

Lewis & Dickstein, P.L.L.C. was able to get a dismissal of an Operating While Intoxicated charge. The allegation was that the client was operating while impaired by the consumption of alcohol. He had his 13-year-old son in the automobile. The charge was in Oakland County, Michigan.

Loren Dickstein, Michigan criminal defense attorney, took over the client's representation after two previous lawyers were unable to get the charges dismissed. When Lewis & Dickstein, P.L.L.C. was retained, the firm promptly went to work diligently and thoroughly reviewing the police reports, records and recordings relative to the case. When it was time for Court, Mr. Dickstein was prepared to show the prosecuting attorney why they were not going to be able to convict our client of this offense, why the field sobriety tests were not performed correctly, and why the client was not likely under the influence. "It's important that people who are faced with criminal charges make sure that their rights are protected. It happens to often that people plead guilty to just "get it over with". It would have been a shame if my client in this case had done that" says Loren Dickstein. Additionally, he discovered that the officer involved in the stop did not accurately report the circumstances of the stop. The prosecuting attorney agreed that a conviction was unlikely and dismissed the OWI charge against our client.
