

“Records of the Haunted” Provides a Gripping Narrative of Paranormal Investigation

BURBANK, CALIFORNIA, UNITED STATES, February 12, 2015 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Paranormal investigators know that the truth is out there. This extremely popular television and film investigation genre has been showcased on many major television networks over the past several years. What has been lacking is a quality paranormal investigator narrative program showcasing this extreme craze over the misunderstood and the unknown. “Records of the Haunted” is a ground-breaking new episodic series which will provide that missing perspective to the benefit of audiences everywhere.

“Records of the Haunted” is a television show under development which is aimed directly at entertaining suspense and horror television fans. During the series paranormal investigators will explore some of the most haunted locations in the world. Every week will present a new investigation into a dark and possibly even terrifying phenomenon in a unique location. These investigations will follow a process designed to understand what is actually going on at the specific location. Think “Ghostbusters” only with a gripping realistic edge. The drama of these ghost and paranormal investigations will be filmed in a cinematic style in order to open up the audience to experience all of the scares for themselves. This will create a show in which anything can and will happen when viewers least expect it. The traditional documentary style of filming will also be used in order to give viewers the sense that they are in the middle of the investigation.

Paranormal investigation shows have forged themselves a permanent place within unscripted television because they are compelling. This is also true in the case of “Records of the Haunted”. The story revolves around lead investigator Ethan Ramirez who has pledged his life to get up close to the unexplained following a dangerous encounter with the paranormal. Ethan is joined by real-life psychic Regan Morrison, world renowned historian and demonologist Gabriel Foster and equipment technician Andre Webb. The show is inspired by the husband and wife team from “The Conjuring”. The team of investigators will help the living rid themselves of paranormal hauntings. This is their story, this is their battle, and these are the records of the haunted.

Backed by a talented and experienced team, the show is starting from the ground up to create a first season with 10 episodes. "Records of the Haunted" hopes to be picked up by a network television company or as an online publication. Patric McInnis will serve as the Executive Producer of the show. Patric is an award-winning producer and filmmaker who was recently recognized at the Cynopsis Model D Awards. Elliott Barker is the Director for the show and he holds over 70 credits on IMDb. That experience includes work on major motion pictures with full theatrical releases. Ed Joyce the Director of Photography also has an impressive major motion picture resume.

The talented team at "Records of the Haunted" are working tirelessly to build a fan base and provide them with quality entertainment. More than just a fan base, "The Records of the Haunted" is trying to build a like-minded community of suspense fans. In order to support the first season of the show an Indiegogo crowdfunding campaign has been put in place and will run until April 9th. The crew will be updating the campaign with conceptual imagery, teaser videos and production news as it progresses. There are many reward levels for those who make a crowdfunding pledge. A pledge of 50 dollars will make funders eligible for the bronze level of the Origins Club. For 50 dollars funders will receive a single entry into the sweepstakes for a chance at one of two key pieces of memorabilia. These are either lead investigator Ethan Ramirez's coat or Regan Morrison's rosary. An entry will also be received for a chance to win a luxurious day-spa massage for two and VIP tickets to a premiere event. This is in addition to early access to production updates, a social media thank you and a personalized thank you video. All Origin Club funders will receive special recognition on "Records of the Haunted" website as well. At higher donation levels there are even IMDb Producer credit rewards and an opportunity to appear as an extra on the show.
