

Joomla—One Of The World's Largest CMS Platforms—Partners With Glip To Improve Collaboration

Joomla, with over 60 million downloads and 200,000 community users and open source contributors, will exclusively use Glip business messaging for collaboration.

NEW YORK, NY, USA, April 1, 2015 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Joomla, one of the world's most popular open source content management systems (CMS), is proud to announce its partnership with Glip—the business messaging app with built-in productivity tools. Joomla CMS has more than 60 million downloads with over 200,000 users and community contributors to the Joomla open source project. The partnership will enable Joomla to streamline communication among its many teams and volunteers, while providing a unified approach to tracking tasks, files and events. For Glip, this deployment represents a milestone, serving one of the world's most prominent open source organizations. This is the first step in Glip's commitment to serving the Joomla community.

“We chose to work with Glip because of the breadth and depth of the offering,” said Tessa Mero, board member for Open Source Matters, Inc. “Glip’s group business chat is world class, and it includes many of the features we need to be more productive, such as video conferencing, file sharing, and task management. We can also easily integrate with other cloud point solutions, making Glip our communication hub for everything we do.”

As part of the partnership, Joomla leadership, working groups and volunteers will be using Glip to collaborate in a variety of ways, from scheduling meetings to tracking action items, to sharing and annotating text files and images, all standard features in Glip’s offering.

best business messaging solution for those who manage their content on Joomla. Today marks the beginning of a long term partnership.”
