Melbourne VIC: Shake A Healthy Meal offers reviews and descriptions of the use of meal replacement shakes. The site also offers a review of the best twenty blenders on the market in 2016. A replacement shake product is not intended to eliminate all regular meals, but rather to provide a low-calorie alternative to one or more meals daily. The shakes contain all the needed nutrients in order to main health, but are lower in calorie counts than what would normally be consumed in a full regular meal.

To be successful in the use of shakes, it is important that the correct ingredients be selected. At a minimum, the shake must have a high protein content, about fifteen grams per serving. The typical proteins are from peas and from whey. A high fibre content helps to block hunger and improve gut health. Low sugar levels and carb levels cause the body to utilise stored fat for energy. The shakes should not contain artificial colourings, flavours or sweeteners. If possible, the user should find shakes that include omega-3 fats and probiotics.

A blender for preparing replacement shakes and smoothies is a key component in any kitchen. There are many good examples of blenders are the market. The article and review included descriptions of the best features for 20 top blender models.

The models and brands which were included in the reviews are major manufacturers such as Ninja, NutriBullet, Hamilton Beach, Vremi, Oster, VonShef, Conair Cuisinart, Vitamix, Blendtec, Margaritaville, Breville, Waring, Omega and Back To Basics. There are variations in price to fit every budget. The capacity of the unit, as well as additional accessories such as the power rating of the motor are factors to consider as well. The appearance of the units is also considered when identifying a rating level. Space to store or use the appliance will affect the buying decisions for some customers.
