Sales Acceleration Technology Market

The analysts forecast the global sales acceleration technology market to grow at a CAGR of 16.3% percent over the period 2014-2019.

Sales acceleration technology is a bridge between CRM software and marketing automation. It is the technology used to enhance sales activities, and it helps companies to convert marketing leads in sales. It comes in after effective marketing campaigns, which resulted in the lead generation and eventually help organization to increase the velocity of their sales process. Earlier, SaaS-based CRM was one of the tools that was used to abstract the useful insights of customers by running BI software functionalities.

Over the decades, CRM has been helping companies to increase revenue, but it does not necessarily accelerate the sales process. As the competition is increasing, companies have started to focus more on inside sales. Some of the sales acceleration technologies helps organizations to respond in a lesser time to leads generated over the web, make more number of calls in lesser time, and use web and video conferencing to avoid traveling and taking a repetitive sales practices.
