WASHINGTON, D.C., U.S.A., February 16, 2017 /EINPresswire.com/ -- SubscriberWise, the nation's largest issuing CRA for the communications industry and the leading provider of big data, advanced-analytics, and business-rules technology, announced today that the company founder and national child guardian is respectfully urging President Trump to include the SubscriberWise Child Identity Protection Act among planned Executive Actions. The proposed legislation was first introduced to U.S. Congressman Bob Gibbs of Ohio in 2014 (<http://www.enhancedonlinenews.com/news/en/20140911006498/en/Child-Identity-theft/Identity-fraud/SSN-index>).

"On Tuesday I tweeted President Trump and the White House," confirmed David Howe, founder of SubscriberWise. "I sent the President two audio files that demonstrate sample scenarios of the nation's dark and enduring child identity theft epidemic. One of the files included an audio recording of a grandmother who stole her grandchild's identity while applying for video service with an Ohio operator. The other file contained the voice of a young victim who is suffering long and alone because his mother damaged his credit when she stole the boy's identity to avoid unpaid programming fees.

“

Today I respectfully remind President Trump that the Credit Czar cannot do it alone despite his power and resources.”

“Regrettably, this is a tragic crisis that impacts hundreds of children and creditors around the nation every single day of the year,” lamented Howe.

“And until the President takes a stand – and acts with the intelligence and courage that the others couldn't – then there's simply no end to the suffering for children across the nation.

“Today I again urge the President to use his Executive Authority to command federal protections for the more than 200 children who are victimized by identity fraud every day in this country. Today I respectfully remind President Trump that the Credit Czar cannot do it alone despite his power and resources.

“And today I urge President Trump to hear the Credit Czar’s plea and begin implementing the technology solutions articulated by SubscriberWise over the past several years,” concluded G.O.A.T. Howe.
