PUNE, INDIA, March 17, 2017 / EINPresswire.com/ --

The analysts forecast the global sperm analytical devices market to grow at a CAGR of 7.83% during the period 2017-2021.

The market will grow moderately at the rate of 7.83% during the forecast period primarily due to the growing prevalence of infertility cases globally among men. In most cases, changes in lifestyle, eating habits, lack of physical exercise, and pollution accompanied by medical disorders like diabetes, leading to stress and obesity, are the major causes of infertility. There are several factors that cause male infertility leading to abnormal sperm production or function. As per some experts, an increase in environmental chemicals can cause a decline in sperm count in men.

Therefore, with the rising cases of infertility in men, there has been a significant increase in the number of sperm testing and fertility treatments that have driven the market consistently in the recent years.
