PARIS, ILE DE FRANCE, FRANCE, September 25, 2017 /EINPresswire.com/ -- Voyagers, a startup specializing in road trip organization has just launched its latest recruitment campaign. The company is looking for three adventurous people to road trip around the world, promote the brand on social networks with photos and videos, and create content for the website. The contract will be six months and renewable, with all travel expenses paid and a salary as well.

The job ad can be found here:

A campaign of this kind could remind of the “best job in the world” campaign by Tourism Australia.

“The goal is to give to the happy few selected the best experience of their life, we really believe that the term Dream Life is appropriate and that for the time the winners will work for us, they will truly have the best job one could ever ask for,” says Voyagers’ CEO Ramy.

The content they will be creating: Itineraries, photos, videos, event organization

The winners will take notes of all the activities they do, from sightseeing to scuba diving, and from there establish the best itinerary in a given area for fellow road trippers. They will also share their journey on social networks and give day-to-day updates, with photos, videos or blog articles. Finally, along their adventure they will also organize events “on the spot” where they are, to gather all road trippers together.
