Author Shares Inspiration For Writing The World That Hates Us

BANDERA, TX, UNITED STATES, February 2, 2018

/EINPresswire.com/ -- A person's beliefs do not make one a better person, it is one's behavior that matters. For Robert "Bob" Jamison, his transition from being unchurched to mildly interested opened his eyes towards the reality about how people live their lives and how the government rather misleads the society.

In Jamison's personal quote: "My vision and I am proposing the vision of my church be to restore the earth, described in Isaiah 49:7-9, to cause our people to inherit the desolate heritages where we live, while being open to link with other churches that choose to link with us as God prepares, equips, and joins us together, passion with like passion," the author expresses the incapacity of the world to contend with human passions, morality and religion. Thus, he explores issues with a biblical strategy.

Jamison, 85, accounts his thoughts regarding the worldly issues through his book, The World That Hates Us: Our Promised Inheritance. He opens about the prison population, rate of divorce, teen pregnancies, voluntary abortions, sexually transmitted diseases, single-parent households, teen suicides, cocaine, alcohol, drug consumption, pornography production and consumption, and more. The author offers a good and evocative novel that is highly recommended for everyone!
