Goyello was founded in 2006 by Peter Horsten and Arie de Bruin in The Netherlands. Over the past decade of its existence, the company has built a strong, quality-oriented IT competence center in Poland, a country known for its software development and business analysis experts. The company employs 120 people and has its primary development center in Gdansk, Poland. It also has a sales office in Hardinxveld-Giessendam, The Netherlands.

Commenting on the acquisition, Mr. Shankar Krishnamoorthy, Co-Founder, Aspire Systems said, “We are very excited to announce this merger and to welcome the entire team of Goyello to the Aspire family. Joining forces with Goyello, we will be able to launch and scale up a strong nearshore delivery capability for our customers, combined with the existing offshore capability of Aspire. Goyello has extensive software development, project management and IT consulting expertise and 120 highly skilled employees. This will help us to serve our clients in Europe better, from a shorter distance and with a better time overlap. One of the major reasons for this merger is the shared vision, strategy and cultural alignment of both companies.”

Speaking on the occasion, Mr. Peter Horsten, Managing Director, Goyello said, “This acquisition offers a great opportunity for Goyello to access wider markets and take on and execute newer and more challenging projects for our clients. This is vital not only from the business perspective but also from a talent acquisition and management perspective. We want to continue offering our colleagues a great place to work.
