Crystallizing Dream Team Directors stunning cinematic style, the epic music video style trailer memorably portrays the world of ancient Mongolia with sword choreography, authentic Mongolian costumes, and Uyanga’s captivating and mysterious vocals.

“It was an ideal video because I love fantasy, costumes, sets and re imagining the distant past” states Co-Director Bayou Bennett. Directing Uyanga with her exotic beauty and hauntingly powerful voice, made me feel that my visual dreams were coming true. I felt as though I were on the set of one of my favorite Asian films such as the “House of Flying Daggers!”

Uyanga is reportedly indeed a phenomenal talent, who was nominated as “female singer of the year” by Cosmopolitan Magazine Mongolia, as well as praised by Newsweek Mongolia, and Forbes Magazine Romania. Bayou and Daniel state they enjoyed filming the trailer at the legendary EastWest Studios in Hollywood, which Bayou and Daniel state has served as the production location for more Grammy-winning albums than any other studio in the world; from Frank Sinatra and the Rollings Stones, to Michael Jackson, John Legend and Moby, among others.

Co-Director Daniel Lir notes: "When you are in the famous Studio 1 at EastWest Studios, you can sometimes feel the ghost of Frank Sinatra. It isn't a scary feeling at all. In fact, you feel the greatest, most sophisticated love of creativity!"

The award winning directing duo brought their signature fashion touch to the beautiful Mongolian costuming in video, and drew from their rich aesthetic background. Having created captivating videos for some of the world's greatest fashion designers and stars including; Oscar De La Renta, Carolina Herrera, Betsey Johnson, Marc Jacobs and Bella Hadid among more, the compelling and alluring result of their work on "Voices of the Empire" is nothing short of brilliant.
